Comedian Radley Chappin was once a great star of an award-winning sitcom – and now?

Now he is a 70-year-old has-been hosting a game show that nobody watches.

Enter Caitlyn Minor.

The intriguing, brilliant Minor quickly takes Chappin's life by storm – growing like an ivy plant and wrapping herself around every corner, every facet of his existence – until it's hard to tell the one from the other, the man from the woman, the master from the servant.

As observers of this spectacle are four people – Chappin's long-time friend, his dutiful manservant, his estranged daughter, and Minor's lover – all of them with different opinions about the tangled, human web being woven before their eyes.

As Minor's control of Chappin's life becomes evermore suffocating and evermore alienating, Chappin is brought to new heights of glory – but to what end and at what expense? – and could it be that the toll on the ambitious, determined Minor will be greater still?

Ultimately, time will tell – but only we can answer - is Caitlyn Minor sinner or saint... mastermind or manipulator... partner or parasite... advocate or abuser?
